VINCI Energies wins a new multi-year contract to maintain an electricity distribution network in Sweden

- Covering maintenance and technical services
- Worth €30 million a year
- For an initial four-year term

VINCI Energies has won the contract to carry out maintenance, repair, connection and alteration work on the electricity distribution network in southern Stockholm for Swedish operator Vattenfall.

The four-year contract – which may be extended for an additional four years – is worth around €30 million a year.

A team of around 100 Omexom employees in Sweden will pool their expertise to deliver the contract. Omexom, VINCI Energies' energy infrastructure brand, is already working on several similar contracts in the country. VINCI Energies, which has 2,500 employees in locations throughout Sweden, generated €640 million in revenue in the country in 2025.

Worldwide, VINCI generated €11 billion in revenue from electricity infrastructure in 2025.
