VINCI becomes the leading partner of Paris Football Club

- VINCI, leading partner of Paris Football Club (Paris FC) for the next five years.
- A major boost for Paris FC's sporting ambitions.
- An ambitious educational and employment-related programme.
- VINCI's first sports sponsorship deal, thereby consolidating its links to the world of sport.

VINCI and Paris FC announced today the signing of a five-year partnership deal. The partnership will include sponsorship of the club's first team, currently joint leader of the National Division (French 3rd division) with only six matches to go before the end of the season. This will boost the club's determination to become Paris' second major football team. An ambition that will be supported by its unique training programme, recognised as such in the world of amateur sport, and that Paris FC will further develop after promotion to a professional football division within the high-potential catchment area of Greater Paris. The VINCI logo will henceforth be displayed on the shirts of Paris FC players for both home and away fixtures.

The second part of the partnership is an ambitious educational and employment-related programme, which aims to supplement the training of young players in the Paris FC Academy and its soccer training school. One of the main purposes of this cooperation, with which VINCI employees will be closely involved on a voluntary basis by sponsoring junior teams, will be to facilitate the professional integration and retraining of the club's young players.

To this end, Paris FC and VINCI will design and introduce specific employment-related modules and workshops (company internships, assistance in drafting job applications, job interview training etc.).

Pierre Ferracci, President of Paris FC, said: "All the young people who join a football club must be able to enjoy a personally fulfilling experience. However, only a select few of the many aspiring football players will make it into a professional team. One of the responsibilities of a training club is therefore to help all its players to maintain close links with the world outside football. This is where VINCI will undoubtedly make a valuable contribution to the club's sporting and educational ethos."

Pierre Coppey, Chief Operating Officer of VINCI said: "This is a challenge that we shall meet together and the beginning of an uplifting human and sporting adventure. VINCI and Paris FC not only share the same entrepreneurial spirit but also the same culture of training and learning by doing. The sporting challenge will go hand in hand with the quest for social integration through sport in general and football in particular."

VINCI affiliated companies have been supporting sport for many years: VINCI Construction France and VINCI Energies support Racing Métro 92; Eurovia, is a partner of the French Athletics Federation and VINCI Autoroutes has recently concluded a framework agreement with the French Ministry of Youth and Sports on the retraining of high-level sportsmen and women.

VINCI also holds a number of stadium concessions and operates stadiums like the Stade de France, the Allianz Riviera Stadium, the future Bordeaux stadium, to be officially opened in May of this year, and, more recently, Stadium at Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park in London. VINCI Stadium is its specialised business unit that helps stadiums realise their economic potential (naming, marketing, events organisation). Finally, VINCI is a builder of sports facilities all over the world, ranging from municipal gymnasiums to stadiums for Euro 2016.
